

HOW WE GOT THERE

A new trip-recap series from Jackman Wheels — and an open door for onX to be where every story ends.

Jackman is a California heritage wheel brand returning in 2026 under Official Wheel Company, built for the trucks, Jeeps, SUVs, and overland rigs people actually drive off-pavement today. How We Got There is our new content series: real trips, told first-person, each one ending with a branded, downloadable route — the drive, the stops, the camp spots, the gear. We'd like that route to end up exactly where it's most useful: loaded into onX Offroad.

THE LOOP

FOR JACKMAN

- Every download is a real off-roader trading an email for something they actually want — a permission-based list built on intent, not a sitewide discount pop-up.
- A recurring, scalable content format that starts local and grows toward bigger expedition-style trips.

FOR ONX OFFROAD

- Content that drives real app opens and real route imports, built by a brand whose entire audience already owns the vehicles onX Offroad is built for.
- A ground-floor collaboration with a brand launching fresh into the same off-road community — not a legacy partnership to retrofit.

WHAT WE'RE ASKING

1

GET THE FILE FORMAT RIGHT

Confirm the cleanest way for a reader to move our route straight into onX Offroad — GPX today, or whatever format your import path actually prefers.

EXPLORE CO-MARKETING

We name onX Offroad as the way to run every route we publish — in the article, on the download page, and in the delivery email. Worth exploring whether onX would feature the series to your own audience in return.

3

A SHORT CALL

No signed agreement needed to start — just a conversation about what's realistic on your side before we lock the format for episode one.

WHERE THIS STARTS

EPISODE ONE — SAND HOLLOW, UT

Our pilot episode, currently in pre-production, follows a route through the Sand Hollow region of Utah. Every episode runs the same template, built so a route file is never an afterthought:

VEHICLE & DIFFICULTY RATING

GET THE ROUTE → ONX

What's next: if the pilot proves the format out, the plan is to scale — longer routes, farther-flung terrain, and a regular cadence readers can count on. We'd rather build that with onX from episode one than retrofit a partnership later.

LET'S FIGURE OUT WHAT THIS LOOKS LIKE.
